Material Aspects:

National Financial Services LLC (XSTM):

State Street Global Markets, LLC (the Broker) does not receive payment for order flow or have a profit-sharing arrangement for routing equity orders (held only) to this venue/market maker. Please note, consistent with the requirements of Rule 606, the data above captures only a portion of the Brokers order flow. The Broker routes customer equity orders (not-held) to national securities exchanges, alternative trading systems, market centers and broker-dealers unaffiliated with the Broker. In exchange for the Broker routing equity orders to these execution venues, certain of these venues offer cash credits for orders that provide liquidity to their books and charge explicit fees for orders that extract liquidity from their books while others offer cash credits for orders that extract liquidity from their books and charge explicit fees for orders that provide liquidity to their books. The credits are considered payment for order flow even though they may not offset the Broker's aggregate payment obligations to the venue. In any given month, the credits received by the Broker from a given venue may or may not exceed the debits charged to the Broker for such period. Typically, these order flow credits have resulted in the Broker receiving a credit against a portion of the expenses due from the Broker and do not result in any cash payments to the Broker. However, it is conceivable such credits could result in cash payments to the Broker.

Material Aspects:

Citadel Securities LLC (CDRG):

State Street Global Markets, LLC (the Broker) does not receive payment for order flow or have a profit-sharing arrangement for routing equity orders (held only) to this venue/market maker. Please note, consistent with the requirements of Rule 606, the data above captures only a portion of the Brokers order flow. The Broker routes customer equity orders (not-held) to national securities exchanges, alternative trading systems, market centers and broker-dealers unaffiliated with the Broker. In exchange for the Broker routing equity orders to these execution venues, certain of these venues offer cash credits for orders that provide liquidity to their books and charge explicit fees for orders that extract liquidity from their books while others offer cash credits for orders that extract liquidity from their books and charge explicit fees for orders that provide liquidity to their books. The credits are considered payment for order flow even though they may not offset the Broker's aggregate payment obligations to the venue. In any given month, the credits received by the Broker from a given venue may or may not exceed the debits charged to the Broker for such period. Typically, these order flow credits have resulted in the Broker receiving a credit against a portion of the expenses due from the Broker and do not result in any cash payments to the Broker. However, it is conceivable such credits could result in cash payments to the Broker.
